Local Luxury Custom Home Builders Honored by National Awards Program

[CITY, STATE and DATE OF RELEASE]— Kevin and Scott Frankel, Co-Presidents of Frankel Building Group in Houston, Tex. received the Custom Builder of the Year Award, presented by the National Association of Home Builders' (NAHB) Custom Home Builders Committee. Frankel and Frankel were honored during the International Builders' Show in Orlando, Fl.

"Kevin and Scott Frankel have shown incredible dedication to giving their customers the best possible experience," said Phil Warrick, President at Piedmont Wholesale Engineered Products and chairman of NAHB's Custom Home Builders Committee. "Frankel Building Group continues to expand in order to provide its clients a one-stop shop for the best in luxury custom homes."

Kevin Frankel joined Frankel Building Group, a custom luxury home building company founded by his father, Jim Frankel, in 2006. A longtime board member of the Greater Houston Builder's Association (GHBA), Frankel served as President in 2015 and as Chairman of the Custom Builder's Council in 2010. Throughout his time in the home building industry Frankel has been deeply involved with HomeAid Houston, a non-profit that builds new lives for homeless families, children and veterans through housing and community outreach.

Scott Frankel began his career at Newmark Homes as a Construction Superintendent building starter homes, predominantly in the Pearland area. He then worked as a construction manager for a building company called Lindenwood Homes, which was later acquired by John Lang Homes. Scott joined Frankel Building Group in a full-time capacity in 2006. In 2015, Frankel was named the Green Advocate of the Year by the GHBA. NAHB honored Scott as the 2016 Best in Green (BIG) Young Professional of the Year.
